Tutor biography

Dr Jan D. Cox was awarded a PhD in History of Art from the University of Leeds in 2014, where he specialised in 19th century Nordic art. He shares his interests between this topic and British art of the early 20th century. In addition to teaching at ICE, Cambridge, Jan is a regular tutor for Oxford University weekly classes, lectures at arts organisations, including Dillington House, and tutors an online course on the Impressionists.

At Oxford Brookes University, Jan was awarded the Jeanne Sheehy Memorial Prize for his work on Christopher Wood; an MA at Bristol followed, where his studies focused on John Minton, Keith Vaughan and British Neo-Romanticism. Subsequently, at the University of Plymouth, he placed online Wyndham Lewis’s art criticism in 'The Listener’ magazine (1946-51). He has lectured extensively throughout Britain, in addition to addressing conferences in Copenhagen, Montreal, Rome and Oslo. He has also visited Brittany in order to research the locations of Christopher Wood’s art.

Jan’s teaching is based around the presentation of images on PowerPoint. He encourages class participation in discussion of the images and also utilises film to provide further stimulus and alternative points of view.

Course syllabus

Aims:

1. To understand the characteristics that make the art of Christopher Wood so individual.
2. To assess Wood’s position in the cannon of twentieth-century British art.
3. To analyse the artistic relationships between Wood and his peers, and those who followed after him.

Content:

Christopher Wood (1901-30) was the English artist closest to the circle of Cocteau and Picasso in Paris in the 1920s. After a bed-ridden adolescence, Wood briefly studied architecture, but soon enveloped himself in the social whirl of the Paris demi-monde. He deliberately tried to paint in the style of many of the artists of the School of Paris and see what he could extract for his own purpose. Later in the ‘20s he had strong friendships with Ben and Winifred Nicholson, and the self-taught Alfred Wallis; all these artists interacted with each other and were significant for their respective outputs. We examine Wood’s meteoric career, the manner in which he finally achieved his own personal style, and his sad demise. We also watch every known piece of film relating to the artist. Students will be encouraged to engage critically with Wood’s work; can we describe his art as some of the most lyrical and enchanting ever produced by an English painter?

Presentation of the course:

The course will consist of PowerPoint presentations of artworks, and also of relevant film clips. There will be significant student interaction with the tutor to facilitate analysis of the factors that affected art production and exhibition. These will include personal, social, political, artistic, and financial factors.

As a result of the course, within the constraints of the time available, students should be able to:

1. Understand the factors that made Christopher Wood an important figure in twentieth-century British art.
2. Follow the progress of Wood’s career and understand its evolution and development.
3. Identify the impact that Wood made on the work of other artists.
